THE RCN EXHIBITION AFTER STONEWALL 50 YEARS OF PRIDE

The Rainbow Cities Network (RCN), which today includes more than 30 cities, was established in 2013 on occasion of the International Day against Homophobia and Transphobia (IDAHOT). The network aims to discuss local approaches in equality and anti-discrimination work for LGBTIQ persons, to learn from each other, and to develop joint strategies.

As a joint project, the Rainbow Cities have organised a photo exhibition with the title “After Stonewall - 50 years of pride“ on occasion of IDAHOT on 17 May 2019: Seventeen cities participate and provide one photo oder poster each for the international exhibition.

In the night from 27 to 28 June 1969, police forces in New York held yet another raid at Stonewall Inn, a bar for homosexual and transgender people in Christopher Street. This time, however, violent clashes erupted between the police and the bar’s patrons, who refused to accept this form of homophobic and transphobic harassment any longer. This was the first of a series of violent protests, which in turn marked the start of a new human rights movement for people who identify as lesbian, gay, bisexual, trans, intersex or queer. Their initiatives developed into the modern LGBTIQ* movement, which soon created the rainbowflag as its defining symbol.

Today, this symbol is known all over the world, and has become a banner for the fight against persecution and discrimination, to achieve recognition and equal rights in all fields of life.

Soon after, the LGBTIQ* community in Europe started taking to the streets to finally become visible, demanding diversity, sexual self-determination and human rights, as well as protesting against discriminatory legal regulations. Proudly and self-confidently, they stood up for their rights and identity, and have been speaking out for diversity ever since. Today the LGBTIQ* community is still known for its outspoken criticism of any form of repression by national, legal or religious institutions, be it in legislation, family life, education, working life, healthcare, public space or any other areas of day-to-day life.

Now that 50 years have passed since Stonewall, it is more important than ever that we pause to look back on our accomplishments with gratitude and pride. Fighting against established institutions was just as necessary as the fight for our cause within institutions. Loud public activism was as important as more restrained, rational argumentation. Individual trailblazers were as significant as the combined power of many. Establishing organisations, groups and centres for LGBTIQ* human rights was just as essential as the support of more and more cities, as city leaders come to realise that they are meant to play a key role in this fight. As Rainbow Cities, we want to express our gratitude to the many, many people who have dedicated their energy and commitment, their hearts and minds to this cause. We thank everyone who stands up for human rights to become reality for all LGBTIQ* people. This exhibition is held in your honour.

LGBTI PRIDE AND FREEDOM ON LA RAMBLA IN BARCELONA

by Ricard Martínez

The city's first LGBTI pride and freedom demonstration was held on La Rambla in Barcelona on 26 June 1977. It was organised by the Catalan Gay Liberation Front (FAGC). Some four thousand people demonstrated that day, in favour of sexual and gender freedom. The demonstration mobilised trans people, lesbians, gays, bisexuals and libertarians, feminists, trade unionists and sympathisers. The photo, made by Ricard Martínez on 2017, offers a combination of images from that day and other LGBTI demonstrations held on La Rambla which put Barcelona at the forefront in the fight for LGBTI rights.

THE SECOND STONEWALL- PARADE IN HAMBURG, 1981

by Chris Lambertsen

The Stonewall Riots has come to be associated with revolt under his oppressive policy and defending rights. In Hamburg too, on actual occasion-harassment of gay people by police- the first manifestation "Homosexuellen Aktionswoche" with 1,500 participants was held in 1980. In a concerted media-campaign, LGBTI* took action against "Rosa Listen (Pink List)" and monitoring on toilets.

by Jean-Baptiste Gurliat/Mairie de Paris

The LGBT pioneers of yesterday are old today, so no question of going back in the closet. Our struggles have accompanied our whole lives & are written in each of our joys and wounds. With GreyPRIDE, we still have to fight to be able to age with dignity and remind all new generations that our struggles have allowed their freedom. Let us not forget all those who are no longer there but to whom we owe everything.

FIRST PRIDE DEMONSTRATION IN COLOGNE: 26 JUNE 1982

by Guenay Ulutuncok/laif

This photo was taken in Cologne on 26 June 1982. About 500 people participated in the first recorded pride demonstration in the city – which was organised by a group called “Kölner Gay Freedom Day”. The banner says and demands “Human Rights for Lesbians & Gays”. The photo is archived at the “Centrum Schwule Geschichte e.V.” in Cologne. Today, Cologne’s “Christopher Street Day/CSD Parade” is one of the biggest pride demonstrations in Europe.

THX FOR FIGHTING! BATTLE ON!

by Alexander Kästel

Pride Parade 2018 in Mannheim: Rainbow families marching. The Federal Minister of Justice chats with a gay man in a leather dress. A fearless trans activist from Turkey - invited by the City of Mannheim - claims her bodily autonomy. This shows remarkable change since the Stonewall riots 50 years ago. But until today 70 countries criminalize same-sex love, the physical integrity of intersex children is violated and trans* people are killed. The lesson is clear: Many reasons to celebrate but also a duty to continue the legacy of Stonewall.

WHERE ARE ALL THE LESBIANS IN BERGEN?? GAY DAYS 1983, BERGEN, NORWAY

by Homofil bevegelse i Bergen/Skeivt arkiv, University of Bergen Library

Saturday, June 25th, 1983. The two gay organizations in Bergen, Norway, had banded together and organized Homodagene ("Gay Days") as a remembrance and celebration of Stonewall and Gay Liberation Day. Homodagene 1983 included radio broadcasts, waffles and coffee in the main city square, a lecture on AIDS, and a parade through the city center, pictured here. Amongst the

The LGBTI Citizenship Center - Luiz Carlos Ruas, created in 2006 as the Center for Combating Homophobia, is the first social service to promote LGBTI citizenship in the city of São Paulo. Its perpetuation and updating symbolizes the existence and the diversity of our community. Through the struggle and resistance to remain in operation for more than 13 years, it expresses our capacity for resilience and overcoming a society marked by the submission of the LGBTI population."

A STONEWALL OF OUR OWN

by Niki Lapkovski

The photograph depicts transgender activists and allies at Prešeren Square in the center of the city of Ljubljana during a flash mob. The flash mob was part of a larger event called TransMisija V (TransMission V), which was the first public march for transgender human rights in the history of Slovenian LGBT+ social movement and the largest moment of transgender visibility in Slovene media. TransMisija, which was previously an expert annual conference for 4 years, was relocated to the streets to symbolize that trans persons too exist in Slovenia, that we aren't fearful and we will take up public space as long as our human rights are being violated. Even if this shouldn't be necessary 50 years after Stonewall, which was exactly this - trans and gender nonconforming persons going to the streets, this is still a reality of many communities worldwide, Slovenian included.

THREE FOR MUNICH PRIDE 2019
by Matthias Keitel (photographer), Frank Zuber (Concept, art direction), Eva, Markus, Patricia, Sandra, Sibylle and Frank (soul of the project :)

Every year the LGBTI community in Munich is invited to participate in the process to find a motto for Munich's Pride celebrations - Christopher Street Day München 2019: 50 years of Stonewall. This year more than 80 ideas were submitted of which three made it to a final shortlist. This photo shows three very different ideas and approaches to the meaning of this special 50th anniversary of the beginning of the modern pride movement and the people who came up with them. On January 22nd a panel of 55 members and activists from all sorts of LGBTI groups voted on the official motto after a very lively debate: 50 years of Stonewall - Celebrate diversity! Fight for equality!
